

Abstract of the Report of the Commission on the Structure of the Federal Government

1955-1956

The Commission on the Structure of the Federal Government was organized by the President in 1955 to study the organization of the Federal Government and to recommend changes that would improve its efficiency and effectiveness. The Commission's report, published in 1956, contains a number of important recommendations.

The Commission's recommendations are based on a study of the Federal Government's structure and its performance. The Commission found that the Federal Government is a complex organization with many overlapping functions and responsibilities. It recommended that the Federal Government be reorganized to eliminate these overlaps and to create a more efficient and effective structure.

The Commission's recommendations are based on a study of the Federal Government's structure and its performance. The Commission found that the Federal Government is a complex organization with many overlapping functions and responsibilities. It recommended that the Federal Government be reorganized to eliminate these overlaps and to create a more efficient and effective structure.

The Commission's recommendations are based on a study of the Federal Government's structure and its performance. The Commission found that the Federal Government is a complex organization with many overlapping functions and responsibilities. It recommended that the Federal Government be reorganized to eliminate these overlaps and to create a more efficient and effective structure.

The Commission's recommendations are based on a study of the Federal Government's structure and its performance. The Commission found that the Federal Government is a complex organization with many overlapping functions and responsibilities. It recommended that the Federal Government be reorganized to eliminate these overlaps and to create a more efficient and effective structure.

The Commission's recommendations are based on a study of the Federal Government's structure and its performance. The Commission found that the Federal Government is a complex organization with many overlapping functions and responsibilities. It recommended that the Federal Government be reorganized to eliminate these overlaps and to create a more efficient and effective structure.

The Commission's recommendations are based on a study of the Federal Government's structure and its performance. The Commission found that the Federal Government is a complex organization with many overlapping functions and responsibilities. It recommended that the Federal Government be reorganized to eliminate these overlaps and to create a more efficient and effective structure.

The Commission's recommendations are based on a study of the Federal Government's structure and its performance. The Commission found that the Federal Government is a complex organization with many overlapping functions and responsibilities. It recommended that the Federal Government be reorganized to eliminate these overlaps and to create a more efficient and effective structure.

The Commission's recommendations are based on a study of the Federal Government's structure and its performance. The Commission found that the Federal Government is a complex organization with many overlapping functions and responsibilities. It recommended that the Federal Government be reorganized to eliminate these overlaps and to create a more efficient and effective structure.